Rachel presented with symptoms of urinary urgency, burning sensation during urination, and lower abdominal discomfort consistent with a urinary tract infection (UTI). A urinalysis dipstick test was positive for leukocytes and nitrites. She was prescribed Nitrofurantoin 100mg twice daily for 5 days and advised to increase fluid intake and maintain good hydration. She was counseled to avoid caffeine and alcohol temporarily, and to monitor for any signs of worsening such as fever or flank pain. Follow-up was recommended if symptoms persist beyond treatment or recur.
